

A series of “almanacs” in the codices were used for determining good and bad days for certain activities and to schedule rituals. The almanac below shows a series of birds that represent the omens or fortunes for particular days. Owls and macaws had negative associations, whereas the long-tailed bird known as the quetzal had positive associations.

owl/bad    quetzal/good    macaw/bad